

The background of the entire image is an aerial photograph of a rural landscape in Galicia, showing numerous small houses with red roofs, green fields, and winding roads.

25

Galician Houses 1994-2004

CASAS DE GALICIA

arquitecturas da urbanización difusa

Toni García (ed.)

CO-02

Casa para Bióloga e Enxeñeiro House for a Biologist and Engineer

Esta casa é froito dunha unión case imposible, coma un deses amores de verán. Un encontro casual nunha noite de calima. Non é que fose un fillo non desexado, senón simplemente froito dunha unión insospeitada de esas que dan sempre unha inmellorábel lembranza pero tamén das que deixan o cu marcado por areas de praia. De no ter sido así, a todos lles parecería inviable a dificultade do encontro entre un escaso orzamento e as necesidades dunha familia que con tres nenos atopábase coma "toro en cacharreira" nun apartamento de Santiago e pedía a berros: espacio, máis espacio.

Espacio por tanto como pura necesidade vital, non para grandes celebracións nin tampouco con pretensións de moito significado, senón simplemente para poder correr e xogar. Así a laboura principal foi a de alongala casa no posible para que os nenos tiveran lugar onde correr e ao tempo abrila ao exterior, para que cando a casa acabase, os nenos puideran seguir correndo finca arriba, finca abaixo.

Dante dessa necesidade imperiosa e pola limitación económica procurei habilitar calquera lugar posible coma sitio para xogar. Por iso o elemento máis importante da casa é o corredor. O corredor non tanto coma lugar de circulación senón coma ese espacio ambíguo onde todo pode acontecer, dende a guerra diaria de almofadas, ate o torneo anual de canicas. A casa enteira se organiza en torno ao corredor e as demais dependencias simplemente o serven coas máquinas e os útiles que máis o molestan: os cuartos, os leitos onde os habitantes do corredor descansan de cando en vez; a saliña, coa televisión e os sofás para os intermedios entre pelexa e pelexa e a cociña con todo tipo de máquinas para preparalo alimento dos infatigábeis habitantes.

O corredor procura por tanto primeiro distancia para poder correr, pero ademais esquinas e voltas onde poder agocharse dos omnipresentes e queridísimos irmáns. Nunha das voltas, o corredor sae ao exterior e transformase nun patio onde continuar cos xogos cando apenas se descubra algo de sol. Nunha outra volta aparece a cociña, que a modo de ponte de mando vixía os xogos dos nenos dende a cancela de entrada ate a última árbore do xardín. A cociña, non tanto coma un lugar propio senón tan so coma un ensanchamento do corredor ao que lle ofrece o seu espacio pero tamén a mesa para aqueles xogos que necesiten asento. Todo queda dado en función dessa necesidade vital de espacio para poder crecer xogando.

E difícil entender unha casa sen unha familia e esta casa tenta sobre todo ser o fogar da familia Vieira, un lugar onde tres irmáns poidan crecer ao abrigo do norte e xogar ate acabar con tódalas almofadas da casa, esperando que chegue o verán para poder saír ao patio e correr máis todavía.

Houbo un tempo no que facer Arquitectura era isto, tentar facelos mellores fogares posibles, hoxe quizais xa non é así, as arquitecturas coma os fogares da xente son cada vez máis virtuais e efémeros.

Quede cando menos a lembranza de aquelas noites de verán e a satisfacción de ver a uns nenos correr nunha casa. Porque houbo un tempo no que non había nin cremas ultravioleta nin videoxogos, tan so suor e graxa, auténtico frenesi desbocado que sempre fai esquencelas areas da praia.

Carlos Seoane

CO-02

48

This House is the fruit of an almost impossible union, like a summer love affair. A chance meeting on a hazy night. It is not an unwanted child, but simply the fruit of an unsuspected coupling like one which leaves a superlative memory but also one's buttocks covered with sand from the beach. If it had not turned out this way, all involved would have found the binomial "low budget - family with three children" unfeasible. The family were like the proverbial "bull in a china shop", living in an apartment in Santiago and crying out for space, more space.

Therefore space was a pure vital necessity, not for great celebrations or laden with pretensions, but simply to be able to run around and play. Thus the main task was stretching the house as much as possible so that the children would have room to run around and at the same time open it up to the outside so that when the house ended the children would be able to continue running up and down in the garden.

Due to this expediency and the budget limitation, great efforts were made to make as much playing space as possible. The corridor became the most important element of the house. It is not just a circulation space but an ambiguous zone where anything can happen, from the daily pillow fight to the annual marbles championship. The whole house is organized around the corridor and the remaining rooms simply serve it containing "inconvenient" machines and utensils: the bedrooms, where the corridor dwellers rest every now and then; the living room, with the television and the sofas for the interludes between battles and the kitchen with all sorts of appliances to make food for the tireless residents.

The corridor primarily provides length in which to run, but also corners and turns where one can hide from one's omnipresent beloved brothers. After such a turn the corridor goes outside and becomes a courtyard to allow for the continuation of games in the sun. After another turn the kitchen appears, which as a kind of command post, permits the surveillance of the children's games from the gate to last tree in the garden. The kitchen is no self-contained space but the mere widening of the corridor to which it cedes its space and its table for games that require it. Everything is subordinated to the vital necessity for space in order to be able to grow up playing.

It is difficult to understand a house without a family and this house attempts to be the home of the Viera family. A place where three brothers can grow, sheltered from the north wind and play until they finish with all the pillows in the house, waiting for the summer to arrive so that they can run around even more in the yard.

There was a time when creating architecture was just that, striving to make the best possible home. Today however, the architecture of the home is more and more superficial and ephemeral.

At least the memory of those summer nights remains and the satisfaction of seeing the boys running around in the house. There was a time when there was no sun block nor video games, just sweat and grease, real runaway frenzy which allows one to forget the sand from the beach.

Carlos Seoane

Localización Site:
A Curuxeira, Santiago de Compostela

Proxecto Project:
Carlos Seoane

Colaborador Collaborator:

Antonio Ramos Reboredo. Aparellador Quantity Surveyor

Data proxecto Date of project:

Outubro 1997 October 1997

Fin de obra Completion date:

Marzo 1998 March 1998

Custe da obra Building cost:

116.000 Euros

Superficie Built area:

Construída Built: 125 m<sup>2</sup>

Oficio propietarios Profession of clients:

Bióloga e Enxeñeiro Biologist and Engineer

Constructor Main Contractor:

Boqueixón S.L.

Lamas, Sergude, Boqueixón.

Electricidade Electrical installation:

Electricidad Lago

Rúa Sta. Uxia de Ribeira 12 1:c

Santiago de Compostela. 981566533

Fontanería e Climatización:

Plumbing and Air conditioning:

Rogelio Lista Pirez, Rúa Noia 5.

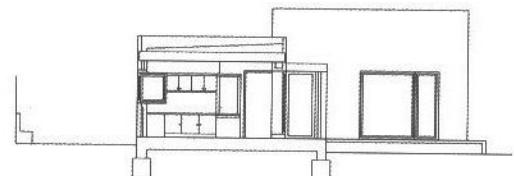

Santiago de Compostela.

CO-02

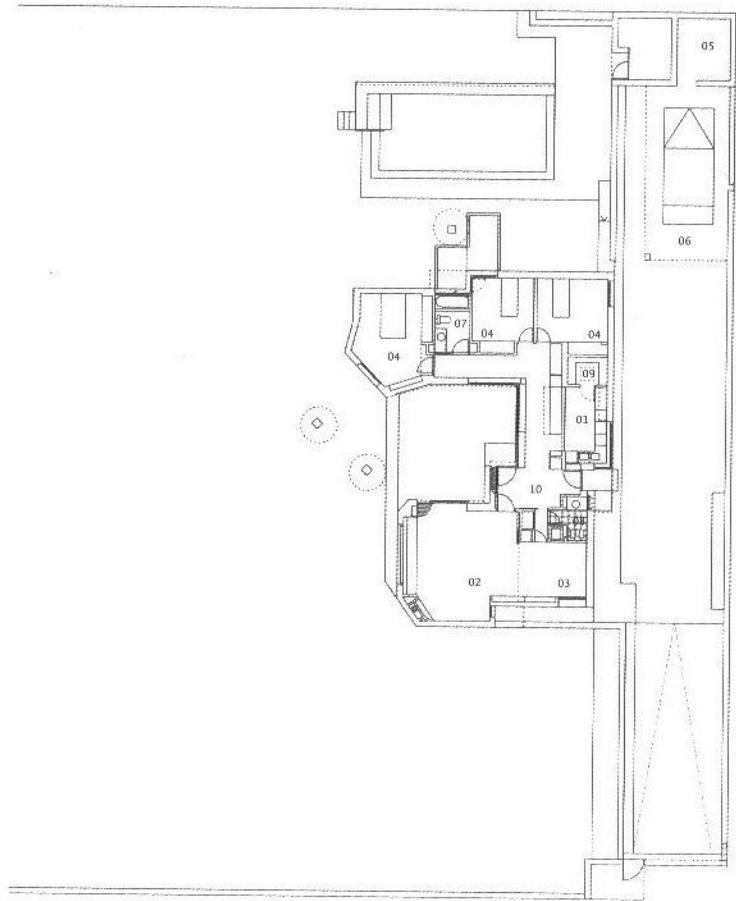

50

Corte Section

Corte Section

Planta baixa Ground floor

01. Cociña Kitchen

02. Salón SITTING ROOM

03. Comedor DINING ROOM

04. Cuarto BEDROOM

05. Lavandaría Laundry room

06. Garaxe Garage

07. Baño BATHROOM

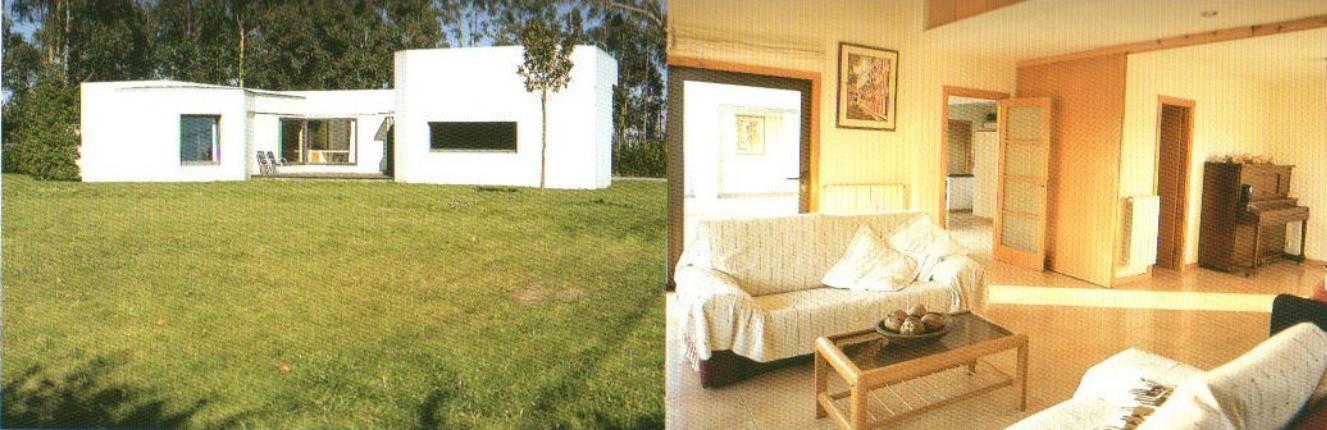

08. Aseo TOILET

09. Despensa PANTRY

10. Vestíbulo HALL

Situación | Site

▲ Vistas exteriores
Exterior views

CO-02

Vista interiores ▲
Interior views

▲ Vista exterior nocturna
Nocturnal exterior view

CO-02